Discuss the determinants of Human Resource planning

There ~~was~~ are several factors influence the human resource planning.

1. State of Economy

Economic conditions greatly human resource planning. An economy with high GDP growth rate and huge growing market generate more jobs. On the other hand economies with low GDP and low market growth create low job opportunities.

2. Labor Market

The availability of ~~poor~~ labor participation rate, skill levels and skill availability of the labor, all have direct or indirect impact on human resource planning.

3. Demographic Factors.

The demographic factors like average age of the working population, gender-mix etc. influence human resources planning. India is considered as the largest youngest population of the world in the age group of 15-35 years.

4. Regulatory Framework

The nature of labor regulations and legislation influence human resource planning. Human resource planning systems have to strictly adhere to the labor regulations prevailed in the country.

5. Industry Growth

If the industry is growing in a fast pace. The naturally it will generate more job opportunities. But industries with poor growth rate reduce demand for workforce.

6. Technology.

Advent of technology increases the demand for skilled personnel. In the present scenario, different industries chase for people having good technical knowhow in various job areas. People having technical expertise are more demanded by companies in the modern world.

7. Nature of Competition

In a state of high competition, companies
